

RES

- To RESIDE, v. n. [resideo, Lat. resider, Fr.]
 1. To have abode; to live; to dwell; to be present.
 How can God with such reside? Milton.
 In no fix'd place the happy souls reside;
 In groves we live, and lie on mossy beds. Dryden's Ensis.
 2. [Resido, Lat.] To sink; to subside; to fall to the bottom.
 Oil of vitriol and petroleum, a drachm of each, turn into a mouldy substance; there residing in the bottom a fair cloud and a thick oil on the top. Boyle.
 RESIDENCE, n. f. [residence, Fr.]
 1. Act of dwelling in a place.
 Something holy lodges in that breast,
 And with these raptures moves the vocal air,
 To testify his hidden residence. Milton.
 There was a great familiarity between the confessor and duke William; for the confessor had often made considerable residences in Normandy. Hale's Law of England.
 2. Place of abode; dwelling.
 Within the infant rind of this small flower,
 Poison hath residence and medicine power. Shakespeare.
 Understand the same
 Of fish within their wat'ry residence. Milton's Par. Lost.
 Caprea had been the retirement of Augustus for some time, and the residence of Tiberius for several years. Addison.
 3. [From resido, Lat.] That which settles at the bottom of liquors.
 Separation is wrought by weight, as in the ordinary resi- dence or settlement of liquors. Bacon.
 Our clearest waters, and such as seem simple unto sense, are much compounded unto reason, as may be observed in the evaporation of water, wherein, besides a terrene resi- dence, some salt is also found. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
 RESIDENT, adj. [residents, Lat. resident, Fr.] Dwelling or having abode in any place.
 I am not concerned in this objection; not thinking it necessary, that Christ should be personally present or resident on earth in the millennium. Burnet's Theory of the Earth.
 He is not said to be resident in a place, who comes thither with a purpose of retiring immediately; so also he is said to be absent, who is absent with his family. Ayliffe's Parergon.
 RESIDENT, n. f. [from the adj.] An agent, minister, or officer residing in any distant place with the dignity of an ambassador.
 The pope fears the English will suffer nothing like a resident or consul in his kingdoms. Addison.
 RESIDENTIARY, adj. [from resident.] Holding residence.
 Christ was the conductor of the Israelites into the land of Canaan, and their residential guardian. More.
 RESIDUAL, adj. [from residuum, Lat.] Relating to the RESIDUARY, s. residue; relating to the part remaining.
 'Tis enough to lose the legacy, or the residuary advantage of the estate left him by the deceased. Ayliffe.
 RESIDUE, n. f. [residu, Fr. residuam, Lat.] The remaining part; that which is left.
 The causes are all such as expel the most volatile parts of the blood, and fix the residue. Arbutnot on Aliments.
 To RESIST, v. a. [re and sisto, Fr.] To stand against.
 In wretched prison long he did remain,
 Till they outran him his utmost date,
 And then therein resisted was again,
 And ruled long with honourable state. Fairy Queen, b. ii.
 To RESIGN, v. a. [resigner, Fr. resigno, Lat.]
 1. To give up a claim or possession.
 Resign
 Your crown and kingdom, indirectly held. Shakespeare.
 I'll to the king, and signify to him,
 That thus I have resigned to you my charge. Shakespeare.
 To her thou didst resign thy place. Milton.
 Phœbus resigns his darts, and Jove
 His thunder, to the god of love. Denham.
 Ev'ry Iliana would resign her breast;
 And ev'ry dear Hippolytus be blest. Prior.
 2. To yield up.
 Whoever shall resign their reasons, either from the root of deceit in themselves, or inability to resist such trivial ingana-tions from others, although their condition may place them above the multitude, yet are they still within the line of vulgarity. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
 Desirous to resign and render back
 All I receiv'd. Milton.
 Those, who always resign their judgment to the last man they heard or read, truth never sinks into those men's minds; but, camelion-like, they take the colour of what is laid before them, and as soon lose and resign it to the next that comes in their way. Locke.
 3. To give up in confidence. With up emphatical.
 What more reasonable, than that we should in all things resign up ourselves to the will of God. Tillotson.
 4. To submit; particularly to submit to providence.
 Happy the man, who studies nature's laws,
 His mind possessing in a quiet state,
 Fearless of fortune, and resign'd to fate. Dryden.
 A firm, yet cautious, mind,
 Sincere, though prudent; constant, yet resign'd. Pope.

RES

5. To submit without resistance or murmur.
 What thou art, resign to death. Shakespeare, Henry VI.
 RESIGNATION, n. f. [resignation, Fr.]
 1. The act of resigning or giving up a claim or possession.
 Do that office of thine own good will;
 The resignation of thy state and crown. Shakespeare, Rich. II.
 He intended to procure a resignation of the rights of the king's majesty's sisters and others, entitled to the possession of the crown. Hayward.
 2. Submission; unresisting acquiescence.
 We cannot expect, that any one should readily quit his own opinion, and embrace ours, with a blind resignation to an authority, which the understanding acknowledges not. Locke.
 There is a kind of sluggish resignation, as well as poorness and degeneracy of spirit, in a state of slavery, that very few will recover themselves out of it. Addison.
 3. Submission without murmur to the will of God.
 RESIGNER, n. f. [from resign.] One that resigns.
 RESIGNMENT, n. f. [from resign.] Act of resigning.
 RESIGNMENT, n. f. [from resign, Lat.] The act of starting RESIGNMENT, s. or leaping back.
 If you strike a ball fiddling, the rebound will be as much the contrary way; whether there be any such resignment in echoes, that is, whether a man shall hear better if he stand aside the body repercussing, than if he stand where he speaketh, may be tried. Bacon's Natural History.
 RESILIENT, adj. [resiliens, Lat.] Starting or springing back.
 RESILITION, n. f. [resilio, Lat.] The act of springing back; resilience.
 RESIN, n. f. [resine, Fr. resina, Lat.] The fat sulphurous parts of some vegetable, which is natural or procured by art, and will incorporate with oil or spirit, not an aqueous menstrum. Quincy.
 RESINOUS, adj. [from resin; resineux, Fr.] Containing resin; consisting of resin.
 Resinous gums, dissolved in spirit of wine, are let fall again, if the spirit be copiously diluted. Boyle on Colours.
 RESINOUSNESS, n. f. [from resinous.] The quality of being resinous.
 RESPIRANCE, n. f. [respirance, Fr. respirantia, low Lat.]
 Wildom after the fact; repentance.
 To RESIST, v. a. [resisto, Lat. resister, Fr.]
 1. To oppose; to act against.
 All the regions
 Do seemingly revolt; and, who resist,
 Are mock'd for valiant ignorance,
 And perish constant fools. Shakespeare, Coriolanus.
 Submit to God; resist the devil, and he will flee. Ja. iv.
 2. To not admit impression or force.
 Nor keen nor solid could resist that edge. Milton.
 RESISTANCE, [resistance, Fr.] This word, like many others, RESISTENCE, is differently written, as it is supposed to have come from the Latin or the French.
 1. The act of resisting; opposition.
 Demetrius, seeing that the land was quiet, and that no resistance was made against him, sent away all his forces. 1 Mac.
 2. The quality of not yielding to force or external impression.
 The resistance of bone to cold is greater than of flesh; for that the flesh shrinketh, but the bone resists, whereby the cold becometh more eager. Bacon.
 Mufick so softens and disarms the mind,
 That not an arrow does resistance find. Waller.
 The idea of solidity we receive by our touch, and it arises from the resistance which we find in body to the entrance of any other body into the place it possesses. Locke.
 But that part of the resistance, which arises from the vis inertia, is proportional to the density of the matter, and cannot be diminished by dividing the matter into smaller parts, nor by any other means, than by decreasing the density of the medium. Newton's Opticks.
 RESISTIBILITY, n. f. [from resistible.] Quality of resisting.
 Whether the resistibility of Adam's reason did not equivalence the facility of Eve's seduction, we refer unto school-men. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
 The name body, being the complex idea of extension and resistibility, together, in the same subject, these two ideas are not exactly one and the same. Locke.
 RESISTIBLE, adj. [from resist.] That may be resisted.
 That is irresistible; this, though potent, yet is in its own nature resistible by the will of man; though it many times prevails by its efficacy. Hale's Origin of Mankind.
 RESISTLESS, adj. [from resist.] Irresistible; that cannot be opposed.
 Our own eyes do every where behold the sudden and resistless assaults of death. Raleigh's History of the World.
 All at once to force resistless way. Milton.
 Since you can love, and yet your error see,
 The same resistless power may plead for me. Dryden.
 She chang'd her fate;
 Resistless in her love, as in her hate. Dryden.
 Though thine eyes resistless glances dart,
 A stronger charm is thine, a generous heart. Logie.
 RESOLVABLE.

RES

- RESOLVABLE, adj. [from resolvere.]
 1. That may be analysed or separated.
 Pride is of such intimate connection with ingratitude, that the actions of ingratitude seem directly resolvable into pride, as the principal reason of them. South.
 As the serum of the blood is resolvable by a small heat, a greater heat coagulates, so as to turn it horny like parchment. Arbutnot on Aliments.
 2. Capable of solution or of being made less obscure.
 The effect is wonderful in all, and the causes best resolvable from observations made in the countries themselves, the parts through which they pass. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
 RESOLUBLE, adj. [resoluble, Fr. resolubilis, Lat.] That may be melted or dissolved.
 Three is not precisely the number of the distinct elements, whereinto mixt bodies are resolvable by fire. Boyle.
 To RESOLVE, v. a. [resolvo, Lat. resolvare, Fr.]
 1. To inform; to free from a doubt or difficulty.
 In all things then are our consciences best resolved, and in most agreeable fort unto God and nature resolved, when they are so far persuaded, as those grounds of persuasion will bear. Hooker, b. ii. f. 7.
 Give me some breath,
 Before I positively speak in this;
 I will resolve your grace immediately. Shakespeare, Rich. III.
 I cannot brook delay, resolve me now;
 And what your pleasure is, I shall satisfy me. Shakespeare.
Resolve me, strangers, whence and what you are? Dryden.
 2. To solve; to clear.
 Examine, sift, and resolve their alleged proofs, till you come to the very root whence they spring, and it shall clearly appear, that the most which can be inferred upon such plenty of divine testimonies, is only this, that some things, which they maintain, do seem to have been out of scripture not absurdly gathered. Hooker, b. ii. f. 7.
 I resolve the riddle of their loyalty, and give them opportunity to let the world see, they mean not what they do, but what they say. King Charles.
 He always bent himself rather judiciously to resolve, than by doubts to perplex a business. Hayward.
 The graves, when they have attained to the knowledge of these resolves, will easily resolve those difficulties which perplex them. Dryden's Duplejnos.
 The man, who would resolve the work of fate,
 May limit number. Prior.
 Happines, it was presently resolved by all, must be some one uniform end, proportioned to the capacities of human nature, attainable by every man, independent on fortune. Rogers's Sermons.
 3. To settle in an opinion.
 Long since we were resolved of your truth,
 Your faithful service, and your toil in war. Shakespeare.
 4. To fix in a determination.
 Good proof
 This day affords, declaring these resolv'd
 To undergo with me one guilt. Milton.
 I run to meet th' alarms,
Resolv'd on death, resolv'd to die in arms. Dryden.
Resolv'd for sea, the slaves thy baggage pack;
 Nothing retards thy voyage, unless Thy other lord forbids voluptuousness. Dryden's Persius.
 5. To fix in constancy; to confirm.
 Quit presently the chapel, or resolve you
 For more amazement:
 I'll make the statue move. Shakespeare.
 6. To melt; to dissolve.
Resolving is bringing a fluid, which is new concreted, into the state of fluidity again. Arbutnot on Aliments.
 Vegetable salts resolve the coagulated humours of a human body, and attenuate, by stimulating the solids, and dissolving the fluids. Arbutnot on Aliments.
 7. To analyse.
 Into what can we resolve this strong inclination of mankind to this error? it is altogether unimaginable, but that the reason of so universal a consent should be constant. Tillotson.
 Ye immortal souls, who once were men,
 And now resolv'd to elements again. Dryden.
 The decretals turn upon this point, and resolve all into a monarchical power at Rome. Baker's Reflections on Learning.
 To RESOLVE, v. n.
 1. To determine; to decree within one's self.
 Confirm'd, then I resolve
 Adam shall share with me. Milton.
 Covetousness is like the sea, that receives the tribute of all rivers, though far unlike it in lending any back; therefore those, who have resolved upon the thriving sort of piety, have seldom embarked all their hopes in one bottom. D. of Pi.
 2. To melt; to be dissolved.
 Have I not hideous death within my view?
 Retaining but a quantity of life,
 Which bleeds away, ev'n as a form of wax Resolves from its figure 'gainst the fire. Shakespeare.

RES

- No man condemn me, who has never felt
 A woman's power, or try'd the force of love;
 All tempers yield and soften in those fires,
 Our honours, interests, resolving down,
 Run in the gentle current of our joys. Southern's Oronoko.
 When the blood stagnates in any part, it first coagulates, then resolves and turns alkaline. Arbutnot on Aliments.
 3. To be settled in opinion.
 Let men resolve of that as they please: this every intelligent being must grant, that there is something that is himself, that he would have happy. Locke.
 RESOLVE, n. f. [from the verb.] Resolution; fixed determination.
 I'm glad, you thus continue your resolve,
 To suck the sweets of sweet philosophy. Shakespeare.
 When he sees
 Himself by dogs, and dogs by men pursu'd,
 He straight revokes his bold resolve, and more Repents his courage, than his fear before. Denham.
 Caesar's approach has summon'd us together,
 And Rome attends her fate from our resolves. Addison, Cato.
 RESOLVEDLY, adv. [from resolved.] With firmness and constancy.
 A man may be resolvedly patient unto death; so that it is not the mediocrity of resolution, which makes the virtue;
 nor the extremity, which makes the vice. Grew's Colima.
 RESOLVEDNESS, n. f. [from resolved.] Resolution; constancy; firmness.
 This resolvedness, this high fortitude in sin, can with no reason be imagined a preparative to its remission. D. of Piety.
 RESOLVENT, n. f. [resolvens, Latin.] That which has the power of causing solution.
 In the beginning of inflammation, they require repellents; and in the increase, somewhat of resolvents ought to be mixed. Wigman's Surgery.
 Lactescent plants, as lettuce and endive, contain a most wholesome juice, resolvent of the bile, anodyne and cooling.
Arbutnot on Aliments.
 RESOLVER, n. f. [from resolvere.]
 1. One that forms a firm resolution.
 Thy resolutions were not before sincere; consequently God that saw that, cannot be thought to have justified that un-sincere resolver, that dead faith. Hammond's Pract. Catech.
 2. One that dissolves; one that separates parts.
 It may be doubted, whether or no the fire be the genuine and universal resolver of mixed bodies. Boyle.
 RESOLUTE, adj. [resolutus, Fr.] Determined; fixed; constant; steady; firm.
 Be bloody, bold, and resolute; laugh to scorn
 The pow'r of man; for none of woman born Shall harm Macbeth. Shakespeare, Macbeth.
 Edward is at hand
 Ready to fight; therefore be resolute. Shakespeare, Hen. VI.
 RESOLUTELY, adv. [from resolute.] Determinately; firmly;
 constantly; steadily.
 We resolutely must,
 To the few virtues that we have, be just. Roscommon.
 A man, who lives a virtuous life, despises the pleasures of sin, and notwithstanding all the allurements of sense persists resolutely in his course. Tillotson's Sermons.
 Some of those facts he examines, some he resolutely denies;
 others he endeavours to extenuate, and the rest he distorts with unnatural turns. Swift's Miscellanies.
 RESOLUTENESS, n. f. [from resolute.] Determinateness; state of being fixed in resolution.
 All that my resoluteness to make use of my ears, not tongue, could do, was to make them acquiesce. Boyle.
 RESOLUTION, n. f. [resolutio, Lat. resolution, Fr.]
 1. Act of clearing difficulties.
 In matters of antiquity, if their originals escape due relation, they fall into great obscurities, and such as future ages seldom reduce into a resolution. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
 The unravelling and resolution of the difficulties, that are met with in the execution of the design, are the end of an action. Dryden's Oedipus.
 2. Analysis; act of separating any thing into constituent parts.
 To the present impulses of sense, memory and instinct, all the sagacities of brutes may be reduced; though witty men, by analytical resolution, have chymically extracted an artificial logic out of all their actions. Hale's Orig. of Mankind.
 3. Dissolution.
 In the hot springs of extreme cold countries, the first heats are unsufferable, which proceed out of the resolution of humidity congealed. Digby on Bodies.
 4. [From resolute.] Fixed determination; settled thought.
 I th' progress of this business,
 Ere a determinate resolution,
 The bishop did require a respite. Shakespeare, Henry VIII.
 O Lord, resolutions of future reforming do not always satisfy thy justice, nor prevent thy vengeance for former miscarriages. King Charles.
 We spend our days in deliberating, and we end them without coming to any resolution. L'Estrange.
 How
